Hobby Horse-Which club member owns this pony?

It all began in the year 1966 in the city of Dearborn, Michigan, a suburb of Detroit. Not much is known about my early years as my birth certificate was lost in a terrible fire at the Ford Motor Company.

My first memories are of living in Chicago, Illinois in a dirt floor pole barn where I sat for 18 long, lonely years. Then a man came and rescued me, saying his son would like to fix me up and make me new again. But that was not the case. His son took one look at me and said I would be more work than I was worth and not worth the effort. Then I was pushed outside with a lot of other cars just waiting to see what would become of me.

Then one day a couple came for me, they told me I was going to move to St. Louis. I was overjoyed to say the least. When we arrived at my new home I found myself parked inside a garage with a concrete floor, no more dirt floors for me! When my new family started working on me they were shocked to find out the extent of damage the years of neglect had done to me. Again I found myself outside awaiting my fate.

After another six months, a man named Mark came and looked me over to see if I had any chance at a new life. He told my new family that with a lot of TLC I could be made structurally whole again. My new family decided I was worth it.

Roush Vent Gauge Pod adds Functionality to Mustang

New Roush Vent Gauge Pod can be added to any 2005-2008 Ford Mustang

LIVONIA, Mich. (February 26, 2008) - True performance drivers want to know exactly what is going on with their vehicle at all times, but much of this detailed information is typically only available through supplemental gauges. But at a minimum, adding an accessory gauge increases clutter and decreases visibility around the dashboard, and typically requires some form of cutting or drilling into your valuable vehicle. The new ROUSH(r) Vent Gauge Pod is cleverly designed to integrate in the Heating, Ventilation and Air Conditioning (HVAC) vent of any 2005-2008 Ford Mustang (including the Shelby GT500) or 2004-2008 Ford F-150 truck. Installation is simple - just remove the HVAC air louvers by gently pulling outwards to remove. The ROUSH

Vent Gauge Pod then replaces these louvers with no cutting, drilling, or trimming required. Installation time is just minutes. Those concerned that the ROUSH Vent Gauge Pod will obstruct the air through the system can rest assured that there is no significant loss of air flow for the cooling and heating functions of either the Mustang or F-150.

The ROUSH Vent Pod Gauge (part number 403840) carries a suggested retail price of $29.99 and will fit any standard 2-1/16 inch gauge (not included). The unit is low profile and designed to match the interior of the vehicle. "This is such a simple idea and gives a clean and professional looking installation, and I am really proud to say that the ROUSH Vent Pod Gauge was dreamed up and created by one of our engineers during his free time," said Jack Roush. "I think this is a perfect example of how our employees are thinking about innovative ways to continue improving the driving experience virtually 24 hours a day." For more information on the new ROUSH Vent Pod Gauge, or to see the complete line of styling, handling and performance parts ROUSH offers for the Ford Mustang and F-150, visit

A Little T-5 History

By Brad Bowling
from Mustang Field Guide: America's Favorite Pony Car

Submitted by Linda Nahlik

Mustangs were not just an American success story, because pony fever was international in scope!

Holland's Ford factory, for example, produced Mustang coupes for domestic sales during model years 1965 and '66, while other European countries imported the cars from the United States.

In Germany, Ford found that Krupp, the steel company that had once provided industrial muscle and armaments for Hitler's war machine, had trademarked the name Mustang for a line heavy-duty trucks it produced from 1951 to 1964. Kreidler, a manufacturer of motorcycles and scooters from 1951 to 1983, also had registered the name for one of its off-road tow-wheelers, which further complicated Ford's effort to sell Mustangs to Germany. Rather than pay Krupp and Kreidler $10,000.00 for their cooperation, Ford reverted to its early project code name and replaced all "Mustang" badging on the cars with "T-5" emblems.

T-5's were not substantially different from Mustangs sold in the U.S. market, but modifications fluctuated based on the eventual customer. For example, cars sold to American military personnel were usually ordered with speedometers and odometers reading in standard miles while German citizens took delivery of Mustangs suspension to handle Europe's rougher road surfaces. Cars were fitted with export braces to stiffen part of the chassis and higher capacity radiators were installed.

Headlights, turn signals, emergency flashers and parking lamps had to meet German's stricter safety standards and T-5 literature listed front disc brakes as standard equipment.

Because they are oddities in the Mustang world, collectors covet the small number of T-5s that returned to the U.S. with service personnel.

NOW MY TRANSFORMATION BEGINS.....

I was loaded onto an auto transport and taken to Mid America Mustang. It took Bill 6 months of welding on my frame, front aprons, floor pans, rear torque boxes and intake cowls to get me strong and solid again.

While at Mid America Mustang my new family rebuilt my 289 engine and C4 transmission. Boy was I ever glad to see them looking all clean and painted when I returned home. I could hardly wait to be put back together. Installing my engine and transmission went smoothly, there were only a few problems to get resolved, such as which side of the frame rail the gas line goes on, getting my new dual exhaust in place since I never had a dual exhaust before.

As I sat there in my garage enjoying the feel of my restoration longing for my body to be beautiful again a new man came and looked me over from bumper to bumper. His name is Dan and he told my new family that he loved my kind and enjoyed making us look beautiful again. Dan took me to his shop where he spent many long evenings and weekends working on removing all the rust from my doors, then lining up my doors, fenders, hood, trunk, headlight bezels, front and rear valances. Once that was done he needed to know what color to paint me. My new family was searching car lots for the perfect color to use with the new basecoat/clearcoat paint that I would be getting in place of the original enamel. Finally one Sunday afternoon, the perfect color was discovered. Dark Copper Clearcoat Metallic. When my family told Dan to paint my dash, inside quarter panels and doors the same color he was not to happy as he didn't think the metallic paint would look very good. So he took the metallic out of the mix and boy does it look great.

After being with Dan for 3 months I was again back home in my warm, comfy garage. My family started putting my interior together. While I was away my front and rear seats were re-upholstered by Color Match and boy did they look great. My new dash pad, door panels, carpet and seat belts all went back in smoothly. I even got two new accessories - my package tray has two oval speakers to go along with my new 10 disc CD changer that's hidden away in my trunk and a beautiful console between my front seats.

My first debut was at Bo Beuckman Ford in the spring of 2006. Man what a COLD day that was. They have a benefit car show for Juvenile Diabetes and a whole lot of beautiful mustangs were there. I was so proud to be included with that group. They were giving three trophies out that day. I could not believe that I received the PEOPLE'S CHOICE TROPHY. My new family was so proud of me. Since that first show I have won many trophies but even better than the winning is all the people coming up to look me over and reminisce about the mustangs they've had and listen as my family tells them my story.

WHICH MUSTANG CLUB OF ST. LOUIS MEMBER DO I BELONG TO?

Answer can be found in the Classified Ads.

Manifold Destiny:

Many of our members as boys and some still continue as adults to belong to an organization devoted to woodcraft, knot-tying and discipline. Looking back, we realized that some viewed the major purpose of this tent-raising and marching society was to keep boys occupied until they were old enough to drive (even though we know better). This month's recipe for engine cooking is a favorite for campfire cooking, as well.

Out of the Fire/onto the Engine Stew

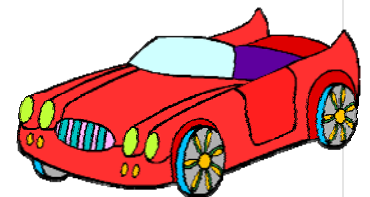

1/4 lb. meat (any kind), cut into 1/2 inch cubes

3 Vegetables you like (potatoes, carrots, onions, celery,etc.)
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix all of the ingredients and wrap in foil.

Ford Enters the Man Cave

by Michael Collins

Submitted by Mike Herbert

One of the recent trends in home decorating is the Man Cave, a room, garage or basement area dedicated to the age-old tradition of male bonding. Man Cave essentials usually include big screen TV's, bars, pool tables and sports memorabilia.

For ambiance, while some guys might consider a picture of dogs playing poker as the perfect artistic accent, others are discovering a newly created series of Ford-themed large scale graphics from a Cleveland, Ohio based company called 4 Walls.

"The 4 Walls products are turning out to be a huge success and we couldn't be happier," said Regina Watson, product licensing manager for Ford Global Brand Licensing, the office that negotiates the use of Ford brand images by outside companies. "People are literally taking our brand into their homes and living with it in a very large format."

Available online at www.4walls.com, the images, which are generally three feet by four feet, are more like murals. They feature a range of Ford symbols, logos, prints and vehicles including classic Mustang's, Thunderbirds, F-150s and Ford GTs.

"The Ford wall hangings are coming along at the perfect time," said Frank Fontana, host of the HGTV cable series Design on a Dime. "For the most part home decorating has always been left to women so there hasn't been much space designated for men in the family. But now they are starting to claim some of those areas and the term Man Cave is getting very popular."

Fontana suggests using the Ford images as a centerpiece for generating various looks and environments.

"I particularly like the pieces that feature nostalgic elements" he said. "The Woodstock Farm image featuring an F-100 for instance, kind of reminds me of an old country gas station."

For a more modern look, Fontana suggests the 2006 Ford GT print and then pulling some of the colors for other areas and themes in the room.

"I would use the gray's in that image and add a lot of stainless steel and high tech lighting," he said. "It's all about using the Ford images as inspiration for the kind of look and feel you're trying to create."

The 3-D like images of Ford vehicles bursting through the wall are perfect for a kid's room, Fontana said.

"I've been a car fanatic all my life. When I was a kid I had a racing bed and I would have loved to have that image of a Mustang crashing through the wall hanging over it," he said.

Another reason for the popularity of the 4 Walls graphics is the versatility that comes from being able to remove or reposition the murals without damaging the wall. According to 4 Walls president Dave Ruel, the hangings feature a new kind of peel-and-stick adhesive that allows the graphics to hang securely and be removed without leaving so much as a residue on the surface.

"They're very easy to use and offer a great look," said Ruel. "Ford products have a tremendous heritage, and we wanted to capture as much of that as we possibly could." To see the complete line of officially licensed Ford graphics, murals and wall borders go to www.4walls.com and click on "Ford Collection."

"The 4 Walls products are generally three feet by four feet, are more like murals. They feature a range of Ford symbols, logos, prints and vehicles including classic Mustangs....."
